Frequently Asked Questions

Will I meet with a lawyer or a paralegal or secretary?

You will meet with a lawyer.

How many times will I have to come into your office?

As a general rule, we will meet with you twice: once to obtain your required information and instructions, and once to review, adjust, and sign your Will(s) and Powers of Attorney.

Can I provide instructions by telephone?

While we prefer to meet with you in person, we can take the initial instructions by phone. You must attend at our offices to sign the final documents. If this is impossible, we can meet with you elsewhere.

How long will this process take?

In most cases, it takes seven to 14 days from the date of the first meeting with a lawyer to complete and see you to sign your Will(s) and Powers of Attorney.

When would I need a more sophisticated Will(s) or Powers of Attorney?

Unusual social or financial circumstances may require documentation that is out of the ordinary. For example, if one of your principal beneficiaries is incapable of managing his or her affairs, you may require a special trust for that person. If your estate is unusually large, this may open the door to the use of trusts or dual wills to save probate or income taxes.

What are the extra costs involved with more sophisticated documents?

When meeting with you, we will discuss your needs and advise you on any additional costs beyond our standard package fees. You can then make an informed decision on whether or not you want to proceed with more sophisticated documents.

If I have an existing Will and/or Powers of Attorney, should I bring them with me?

Yes, if you can readily locate them.

How should I prepare for the first interview?

You don't have to prepare extensively for our first interview. You will already know most of the required information. Any missing information or documentation can be provided afterwards.

Can you come to my home to take instructions and sign documents?

We can come to your home for either or both of the interviews needed to complete this process. However, this will result in additional fees since more lawyer time and more staff time will be required. We would be pleased to discuss the additional costs with you.
